Happenings in and Around Frank

George Whittaker, license inspector spent Monday in town.

Andy Good, the mayor of Crow's Nest, spent Sunday in town.

A. B. Trites, of Trites & Woods, came down from Fernie on Tuesday and spent several days in town.

W. J. Budd came down from Princeton on Monday and registered at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium.

J. W. Parker came in from Vancouver on Monday in the interest of some mining claims which he has in the "Crow."

Mr. Budd informs us that work on the construction of his large cement plant at Princeton is progressing favorably and he hopes to have it working by the end of the year.

C. Esland, of London, England, registered at the Imperial hotel on Monday. Mr. Esland is a man of great wealth and has a large mining interest in this section of the country.

W. Simpson received word on Friday to the effect that he had been successful at the engineers' examination which was held in Lethbridge and that first-class engineer papers had been issued in his favor.

Mrs. H. Craig, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. E. T. Fitzsimmons, during the past three or four weeks, left on Tuesday for the Pacific coast where she will visit some friends before returning to their home in Ontario.

C. Burrows was up before Inspector Belcher on Monday charged with assaulting Steve Cuk and was fined $10.00 and costs. Steve Cuk was afterwards charged with having assaulted C. Burrows' small boy and was fined $2.00 and costs.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gardner, of Elk River, drove in from Michel on Saturday and registered at the Frank hotel. Mr. Gardner has large interests in several iron and other valuable ore claims in this district and left on Sunday to inspect some property at the North Fork.

R. H. Bohart, T. H. Bohart and Miss Bohart, of Wardner, came to town on Sunday and registered at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium. R. H. Bohart returned home on Monday while Miss Bohart remained here to take care of her brother who is receiving treatment for rheumatism.

J. Whiller has secured the contract for the building of an office and two dwelling houses for the Hillcrest Coal & Coke Co., of Hillcrest and commenced work on the excavation for the said buildings on Tuesday. One of the dwelling houses which Mr. Whiller is erecting will be occupied by Mr. Brown, the manager of the coal company.

H. H. Banks has resigned his position as master mechanic with the Canadian Coal Consolidated plant here and leaves on Monday to take a similar position with the Royal Collieries, at Lethbridge.

W. I. Huston, who has been principle of the public school here for over four years, has resigned from that position and will say good-bye to his many friends here next week when he will leave Frank. Mr. Huston's numerous friends in The Pass will be sorry to see him take his departure and will all join in wishing him success in his mining ventures.

CORPUS CHRISTI CHURCH BEST IN THE PASS

Due to the Untiring Efforts of the Reverend Father Lajat

It must be very gratifying to the members and adherents of the Roman Catholic church in The Pass to know that they have a priest who displays so much activity and exercises so large a degree of earnestness for their church and its doctrines as the Rev. Father Lajat has done during his ministry at Frank.

It was our good fortune and great pleasure this week to visit Corpus Christi church and, although we had previously heard that the Roman Catholics were making their house of God, which stands so prominently on the hill, one of the neatest and most handsome edifices in The Pass, the splendid sights which we beheld on entering that sacred place far exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and, we are sure, would compare favorably with many of the churches in some of the large cities. This is all due to Rev. Father Lajat who never ceases to work for the interest of his church and parishioners.

On entering the Corpus Christi church, the first thing which attracted our attention was a large statue of Christ the Redeemer, which image was presented to Rev. Father Lajat during his recent visit in Belgium. The Altar is beautifully and tastefully made and is in keeping with the splendid statue erected over the same. The reverend Father has also put up on the walls four statues which some friends of his in France gave him during his visit there last winter. Those statues are so placed that the people may have full view of them. They are, the Virgin Mary, St. Joseph, St. Benedict and St. Anthony.

The Corpus Christi church was recently erected through the efforts of Rev. Father Lajat. It has a seating capacity of over two hundred. It is nicely painted both inside and out. A bell will shortly arrive from Bellin, Belgium. To say the least, Frank has the best church in The Pass and one of the neatest churches in the Province.

Mrs. M. Drumm gave a delightful dinner in honor of Mesdames Craig and Ball and Miss Ball, on Saturday evening. The dinner was given at the Imperial hotel and was very much enjoyed by all the ladies present. Besides the hostess and Mrs. Craig, Mrs. Ball and Miss Ball, there were present Mesdames V. H. Wetmore, Windsor, Clearihue, E. T. Fitzsimmons, H. C. Moore and Cruickshanks, Misses Berry and MacRury.

Ice cream and refreshments will be served on the verandah or the inside of the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium every Sunday and Wednesday

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is sold on a guarantee that if you are not satisfied after using two-thirds of a bottle according to directions, your money will be refunded. It is up to you to try. Sold by dealers everywhere.

The governor in council on Monday decided that the law should take its course in the case of John [illegible], the Calgary murderer, and he was hanged on Tuesday.

Happenings in and Around Bellevue

On July 4th, Bellevue football players will take a visit to Coleman when they expect to win $100.00. It is hoped that Tristram will be in good form and his slight accident right for that day.

The Rev. Irwin landed in camp last week and preached his introductory sermon on Sunday last. It is hoped that he will be a success and a sportsman of the highest kind. A large crowd gathered together in the church to hear their new pastor. He anticipates a large crowd to hear him next Sunday.

On Sunday, June 11th, the Rev. T. D. Jones preached his farewell sermon. A fairly large congregation assembled to hear him. He took for his text "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul or what shall a man give in exchange for his life." After the sermon, he thanked all who had helped him in his church service and social life.

Some grand sports have been arranged for next Saturday. A capital programme has been carefully arranged and it is hoped there will be large crowds from the surrounding camps. About $300 in prizes will be given to the winners of the different items. A good day is anticipated and it is hoped the weather will be fine. For full information of the sports apply Fred Chappell, Hon. Secretary, Bellevue. On the following Monday a dance will be held in the Socialist hall when it is hoped a grand time will be spent.

On Sunday, June 18th, a meeting of the Bellevue baseball team and the football teams of the surrounding camps, was held to consider the drawing up of a league to be played for this season. The teams were represented as follows: Hillcrest, A. Crowthers; Lille, Const. Bachelor, Bellevue, F. Chappell; Passburg, Dr. Bell; Burmis and Lundbreck, T. Sloan. Const. Bachelor was in the chair and Mr. J. Brenler, of Hillcrest, was appointed league secretary. Referees were appointed and the schedule for the season was drawn up. It was agreed to call it "The Bellevue and District League" and that it should be ruled by the Crow's Nest Pass League rules. Blairmore, Frank and Coleman were approached to join but could not see their way clear to do so Bellevue team and Hillcrest played on Wednesday, June 28.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A GRIM SPECTRE.

Disease Is the Dread That Haunts Steamboat Captains.

Captain Mendus of R.M.S. Dominion" realized more than anyone the other day that the anxieties of an emigrant liner's commander, do not end with the safe piloting of his ship through undreamt of perils across the Western Ocean.

There are three things the commander of a passenger liner has a wholesome dread of — fog, fire and disease. The former can be dealt with by slowing down and a frequent use of the syphon horn, and other precautions to minimize the risk of accident through the demon fog, and on no road of the seas is fog so relentlessly met with as making the Gulf, the Straits of Belle Isle and even in the Gulf itself.

Fire is a devastating terrifying agent, but with a good head of steam pumps and hose in good working order and the well drilled ship's fire brigade made compulsory on all passenger carrying liners nowadays a fire at sea is not so terrible a thing as it reads in cold and sensational print, and has taken place and been so effectively and promptly dealt with that the passengers have been in ignorance of its presence.

There is one thing every commander of a vessel, large or small, hopes and inwardly prays will never be his lot to contend with, and that is the grim spectre disease, and when its presence appears in so malignant and hideous a form as the dreaded smallpox, he and the company whose flag the ship proudly flies are objects of deep and sincere sympathy.

There are no weapons fashioned to fight this insidious foe, time and isolation only can tell to what extent its ramifications have extended. To be almost within sight of Quebec—only forty miles away—and to be held up for days, possibly weeks—is cruel luck the severity of which is accentuated when it is remembered that it is through no fault of Captain Mendus, or any relaxation of the company's stringent hygienic rules of health, that the serious and irksome detention has been caused, detention, which however, is vitally necessary for the safeguarding of Canada's health from an epidemic of this dread scourge.

An Editor's Irony.

Time and time again editors have taken a fling at the people who seem to think that filling an editorial chair is a mighty simple, easy matter. Probably the best bit of irony on the matter is the following by Bob Lowery, one of the best-known newspapermen in Western Canada:

"Every once in a while some cheerful individual remarks to us, 'Well, now that the paper is out, I suppose you can take it easy for three or four days.' Yes, how delightful it is that a country editor has nothing to do between press days. Business runs along automatically. When paper bills come due money drops off the trees with which to pay them. Subscribers vie with each other to see who can be the first in advance. Advertisers beg for additional space. And the way the news hunts up the editor is also pleasant to contemplate.

"There is something strange about the way the news items act. When the paper is out the editor simply goes to his desk and leans back in his easy chair and looks wise and waits for next week's press day. The day before press day the people line up in front of the office door and then they file past the desk and tell him all the news of the week. He writes it up in fifteen or twenty minutes, takes it back and hangs it on a hook. The compositors take the copy and shake it over the type cases, say a few mystic words, the type flies into place, and after a few passes by the foreman the forms are ready for the press again. And the editor goes down and deposits some more money in the bank. It is the greatest snap in the catalogue. Now, if the editor could only do away with press day his job would be complete.

Slightly Mixed.

"A great many people have postage stamps who sleep in their archives; in old correspondences or, have the easiness to obtain stamps in their relations.

"The MAISON M—— solicit offers from every person who have stamps in their possession, because it is the Firm who payed the highest the lots, collections and archives.

The Three Rivals.

March building statistics for Winnipeg show a decrease in totals of a million and a half dollars compared with the same month last year, says The Winnipeg Telegram. Vancouver, on the other hand, reported an increase of more than a million dollars for the same period. The non-taxing of improvements in the British Columbia city is responsible for this magnificent result. No other cause could have enabled Vancouver to outstrip Winnipeg. Even at that the Manitoba city has done exceedingly well. But Calgary—well, her increase during the month of March last was greater than the total reported for the same month last year. An increase of nearly $600,000 is a handsome exhibit for the city which a few years ago was a cow town at the foot of the Canadian hills.

FADING AT THIRTY

When Woman Should be in the Prime of Charm and Beauty

At thirty to thirty-five a woman should be in the prime of charm and beauty, and yet many woman begin to fade before then. Wrinkles appear and the complexion grows sallow. Dark rings surround the eyes, and headaches follow, with backaches and low spirits. The cause of this is simply need of blood nourishment. Good, pure blood is the life of a woman's beauty and health. It is good blood that brings the glow of health to the cheek, brightness to the eye, and elasticity to the step, and the general happiness of good health. When woman feels jaded and worn out her blood simply needs attention, and the one unrivalled and sure remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which supply the rich, red blood that repairs the waste, dispels disease and restores the brightness and charm of womanly health.

Mrs. H. G. Hart, Winnipeg, Man., is one of the thousands of sufferers who owes her present health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "I had suffered for a long time, not knowing what the trouble was, I had doctored with several doctors, but only seemed to be growing worse. The last doctor I had told me the trouble was anaemia, that my blood was turned to water and that my condition was serious. But his treatment, like the rest, did me no good. I got so bad that if I excited myself, or went up stairs, I was completely out of breath and felt as if I was going to suffocate. My heart would palpitate violently, and at times I would suffer with terrible pains from it. I had a yellow complexion, my lips had lost their color, and I had no appetite and could not eat. I grew so weak I could hardly drag myself along, and my feet seemed to have weights on them. I was so completely run down that I thought I was going into consumption. At this time a friend urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking a few boxes I found my health improving, and after taking the Pills for a couple of months I was entirely well, and have since enjoyed the best of health, and I feel that I can never say enough in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Delightful

"There are many delightful dishes to be made from left-over food." "That's nice," responded the young bride. "There's a great deal of food left over since I began doing the cooking."—Kansas City Journal.

Globe Trotters Plus

A number of tourists were recently looking down the crater of Vesuvius. An American gentleman said to his companion:

They Cleanse While They Cure.—The vegetable compounds of which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are composed, mainly dandelion and mandrake, clear the stomach and intestines of deleterious matter and restore the deranged organs to healthful action. Hence they are the best remedy for indigestion available to-day. A trial of them will establish the truth of this assertion and do more to convince the ailing than anything that can be written of these pills.

Amazing results have been achieved at the ultrapowerful Marconi wireless telegraph station near Pisa. Communication was established with stations in Ireland and Canada and Massowa in the East African Italian colony of Eritrea.

FARMER'S WIFE TELLS HER STORY

FOUND A CURE FOR ALL HER ILLS IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

She was tired, worn-out and nervous and suffered from Rheumatism, but two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Hawthorne, Ont. (Special).—Mrs. T. G. Alexander, wife of a well-known farmer living near here, adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have learned from their own experience that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Kidney Disease.

"I suffered for twelve years," Mrs. Alexander says, "My back ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing, I was nervous and tired and I was troubled with heart flutterings. Rheumatism developed and added to my suffering.

"I was in a very run-down, worn-out condition when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, but I am thankful to say they gave me relief almost from the first. Two boxes cured me completely."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. Cured Kidneys mean that all impurities are strained out of the blood. That means pure blood all over the body and the banishment of that tired, heavy feeling and those pains and aches that impure blood brings.

American Girl Interferes With the Will of the Czar of Russia

By EVELYN MOORE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

very one said that Jack Worthington should have been a man. One ay infer from the name that Jack as a man, but this is not so. Her me was Jacqueline. When she was little girl she wrote it Jac, but as e grew older, finding that every one e wrote it Jack, she fell into line. here was nothing unfeminine about ss Worthington. It was the strength purpose and the daring in her that ed her friends to say that she ould have been born masculine. She ad a woman's heart and a man's and and courage.

But to begin at the beginning. Jack Worthington lived in Washington, being the daughter of a retired admiral in the United States navy. There are attractive young men attached to the foreign legations in Washington, who frequently find wives among the girls of the capital. The secretary of the Russian embassy was one of the finest of these fellows—tall, handsome, with blue eyes, light hair and beard; indeed, a perfect type of the sons of the north, belonging to the higher class.

Alexis Droubeloff fell a victim to a certain witchery there was in Jack Worthington. Unfortunately for his suit, she had read much of the efforts of certain noble men and women in Russia to throw off the bureaucratic yoke and had become an ardent sympathizer with the Russian revolution. While her heart went out to meet that of the secretary, she would not give him any encouragement, since he was in the service of what she considered tyranny. The result of the affair was that she converted him to her way of thinking.

Droubeloff had one of those self sacrificing natures possessed by all Russian revolutionists. Once converted he conceived it to be his duty to go back to Russia and contend for the cause. He told Jack that though he loved her and should always love her he must relinquish her, for henceforth his life and liberty would be in constant jeopardy.

If anything was needed to attach the girl's heart irrevocably to the young diplomat this stand was quite sufficient. But, since he had determined to resign from the government service and go to Russia for the purpose of thwarting that government's will by assisting to educate the people, the lovers were obliged to part. Jack kept her affair a secret from her father, her mother and all the world, and when the secretary of the Russian legation resigned his position and sailed away no one knew that he took her heart with him.

Droubeloff had not worked long in his new field before he was arrested and sent to Siberia.

With Droubeloff shut up for life in a Russian prison in the frozen regions of the north, Jack Worthington a society belle in the western hemisphere, this story should by good rights come to an end here. But the moment Jack Worthington heard of her lover's exile to Siberia that strong will and ability to do which have been mentioned as characteristic of her began to assert themselves. She was now twenty-four years old and possessed a fortune in her own right. She informed her father and mother that she was going abroad, and going alone. Had they known her purpose, instead of permitting her to go they would have more likely planned to place her in a lunatic asylum.

Jack's sympathy with the Russian revolution had been fostered by certain Russian refugees she had met who had depicted the condition of the Russian lower classes and the efforts of the revolutionists in their behalf. One of these men, Michael Zarowitz, who was preparing to return to Russia, she took into her confidence, and the two went away together. Before Droubeloff left the Washington Jack had introduced the two men, who had several conferences.

Jack's object in going to Russia was to free her lover. They formed definite plans, leaving only to chance those matters which no one can foresee. She believed that no prison is strong enough to hold a person whose friends are determined to get him out. She was to plan Droubeloff's escape, and Zarowitz was to execute it. There were to be no more persons taken into the secret if it were possible for the two to work it alone.

Fortunately Miss Worthington possessed a good constitution as well as a strong will, for the journey from St. Petersburg to Kara, where Droubeloff was confined, is a hard one. She received her passports through the American minister, whom she had known in Washington and who exerted himself in her behalf. She traveled ostensibly as a correspondent for American newspapers going to Kara to report on the condition of the prisons there.

When within a hundred miles of Kara she began to make provision for a flight by buying horses and sleighs, which she left at convenient distances along the route to be used as relays. Those nearest Kara she directed to be kept in readiness to be turned out in a few minutes' notice.

Before reaching their destination the travelers separated, appointing a place of rendezvous. When they arrived Miss Worthington made it her first business to find a convenient abode, for she had no mind to defeat from the chances of accomplishing her object by making haste. She found a stopping place in the family of a keeper of one of the prisons and, having settled herself, presented to the governor her papers embodying instructions for facilities to be given her in visiting the prisons. This done, she entered at once on an examination of them, writing a report which she took care to make very favorable to the management and submitted it to the governor for his inspection. Her real object was to discover in what prison and what part of the prison Droubeloff was confined and to learn as much about it, its entrances and exits and rules as possible.

One day when Miss Worthington was making an inspection a squad of prisoners was being marched to the mines. In the line was Droubeloff. So changed was he that Miss Worthington did not know him. And it was perhaps fortunate that she did not, for her recognition of him might have proved dangerous. But he recognized her. Though filled with a wild joy, he managed to show no evidence that he had ever seen her before. Seeing a pair of eyes fixed on her, the knowledge that they belonged to her lover came so slowly that she, too, was enabled to avoid any appearance of recognition.

Jack recalled her parting with Droubeloff at Washington. It was after a reception at the White House, and he was in evening dress, with the insignia of several orders upon his breast. What a change in this unkempt man in the clothes of a workman with a pick and shovel on his shoulder! The meeting not only stimulated her desire to free him, but added to that daring tempered by caution which was natural to her.

The next day she found a way of meeting Zarowitz. He had represented himself as from the country round about Kara, who had come for the purpose of getting employment about the prisons. Miss Worthington told him of the prison in which Droubeloff was confined, and it was agreed that he should concentrate his efforts upon that particular prison. This was all that could be done at present.

It was two months before Zarowitz secured one of the most unimportant positions in the prison where Droubeloff was confined, but once there he gave evidence of such vigilance that it was not long before he was promoted to be keeper.

Miss Worthington's plans were now nearing a head. She had succeeded in getting a young daring man in as keeper of the prison in which her lover was confined. Methods of getting Droubeloff out were plentiful, but would any of them be successful? There is one, or a part of one, that has been often tried with success. Prisoners have been enabled to gain time by leaving a dummy in their cells, and this was the first matter for preparation. In order to have a dummy ready Miss Worthington gave Zarowitz certain materials for its composition, which he took with him to his quarters in the prison.

Meanwhile the prisoner and his keeper had come into secret communication, and Zarowitz was watching for an opportunity to connive at the former's escape. A failure was not only to be dreaded for Droubeloff, but for Zarowitz, and what appalled both men was the possibility of Miss Worthington being implicated. Zarowitz would suffer untold miseries if as keeper he assisted a prisoner to escape, and should it become known that the Russian police had long been hunting for him it would add to his tortures. If Miss Worthington were arrested as an accessory she would doubtless remain in the Kara prison for the rest of her life. For this reason Droubeloff asked Zarowitz to beg her to go away and leave the two to work out the problem by themselves, but she resolutely declined.

The escape was attempted in the evening. The prisoners were marched after a day's work into their cells. The keeper went to Droubeloff's cell and spoke a few words in a whisper. Droubeloff took the dummy from under his cot and placed it on the cot with the face toward the wall. Zarowitz, who had left him, presently returned with a workman's suit of clothes. Droubeloff put it on and, leaving the cell, walked boldly down the corridor.

There was no way to eliminate the guards standing at different places on the line of exit. The prisoner must run the risk of their recognizing him. The chances were that, not being personally acquainted with the prisoners, they would not recognize one of them in the garb of a workingman. But this was not certain. Droubeloff passed the first guard in his exit from the building. Walking on deliberately, he passed the one in the yard. It was hard for him to resist the temptation to make a dash through the gateway, but he resisted. Passing out an any ordinary laborer would do, he was beyond the wall. The temptation to run was all but irresistible. When he drew his figure was growing dim to those at the gate he hastened his step.

At an appointed place he found a sleigh. He stepped into it beside Miss Worthington, who pulled a robe up over him, and the driver, who was none other than the keeper, who had gone before him, drove away.

Not a word was spoken as the horses trotted leisurely toward the outskirts of the prison settlement, while under the robe two lovers clasped hands in mingled exultation and fear that all still might be lost. But once on the main road leading southwestward the gait was changed from a trot to a gallop.

The relays took the fugitives rapidly to the borders of Russian territory and once across they were safe.

IS MYSTERY SOLVED?

THE SPHINX MAY HAVE REVEALED ITS SECRET AT LAST.

The Inscrutable Head That Has Gazed Out Over the Desert Is Said by Professor Reisner to Be the Gigantic Statue of Cephren Who Built the Greatest of the Pyramids —Yields Rich Treasures.

What man or woman is there among us who has not heard of the Sphinx? What traveler in Egypt, that land of fascination, shrouded in mystery and majestic calm, who has voluntarily missed paying a visit to the mighty stone image which for centuries has defied all efforts to lift the veil concealing its origin and symbolism. For hundreds of years it has kept its motionless watch in the desert, striking a chill into the hearts of all who see it. It seemed a great mocking thing of stone set up to teach man the lesson of his own impotence and frailty, mocking at the fruitless efforts of puny mortals to read its secret, certain in the knowledge that it was safe. And now the man is with us who claims to have accomplished what all his precursors throughout the centuries have failed to do—to have read the riddle of the Sphinx. The archaeologists of to-day, of course, claim that Professor Reisner's solution is just what they themselves expected, nothing startling, nothing particularly original; but archaeologists are like the rest of humanity in most vital respects, and they have learnt the wisdom of saying, "I told you so."

Authorities have held widely divergent views as to the date of the carving of the image; by some it is allotted to the period before the fourth dynasty, in which the Second Pyramid was built; whilst by a majority of others it is credited to later times, owing to the more frequent appearance of sphinxes at a later date. Professor Reisner has discovered the statue of the builder of the Third Pyramid which also owes its origin to the fourth dynasty, and his headdress is in every respect similar to that of the Sphinx. Since this particular form of head-dress does not appear anywhere else, the two obviously synchronize. Thus it is proved that the Sphinx is the effigy of Cephren, son of Cheops, who built himself the first and greatest pyramid of the three tombs. The intention in placing the head of the king on the body of a lion is to convey the idea of the monarch trampling down his foes.

Aker, the watchman of the netherworld and guardian of Ra, the sun-god, is frequently depicted as a sphinx, as, indeed, is Ra himself when he goes forth to war. That explains the fact of the Sphinx being face to face with the rising sun, the peculiar duty of sphinxes is to guard tombs from desecration at the hands of the stranger, so that its position with regard to the pyramid is accounted for. And it is strange how that lifeless thing of cold stone does trouble the minds of those who venture near. You who have gazed into the immobile features of that mighty countenance, which yet has such a strikingly searching and awe-inspiring effect, will realize what I mean. The last strong proof that the Sphinx is representative of Cephren Prof. Reisner came across during excavations around the Third Pyramid, for he, as stated, discovered the statue of Mycerinus, builder of the same. It is probable that this Mycerinus was a nephew of Cephren.

In 1903 three professors, Steindorff, Schiaprelli, and Reisner, were allowed to investigate at Gizeh. Schiaprelli took the First Pyramid, Steindorff the Second, Reisner the Third, which was productive of most interest. The last named professor first turned his attention to the great cemetery west of the First Pyramid, which had been divided between the three of them, his particular portion being the northerly. Here he unearthed the tombs of many of the sons and daughters of Cheops and other matters of interest, his chief work in this direction being the identification of the royal cemetery of Cephren, near the Second Pyramid. In 1906 and 1907 the excavation of the Pyramid Temple of Mycerinus was undertaken. Here was discovered a magnificent alabaster statue of Mycerinus, of which the head was outside the temple, so close to the surface that a tourist's stick or umbrella might have given away its whereabout.

In 1908, while searching for the valley temple of the Third Pyramid —for the German had previously discovered a valley temple to a pyramid of later date, proving that the Sphinx Temple was the valley temple of the Second Pyramid—a mud-brick building was discovered, and therein were disclosed a number of priceless treasures. In 1910 was found a beautiful pair statue, in dark slate, of Mycerinus and his queen, which was almost incredibly well preserved, and had passed through the centuries undiscovered with only a stone between it and the light of day.

Three temples in all were found, one by Mycerinus, one by his son Shepseskaf, both unfinished, and one by Pepy II. of the sixth dynasty. Unfortunately in an article of this kind, one can only touch lightly on this enthralling subject. The great point is, however, that proof is given of the fact that the statues discovered are of the fourth dynasty period, and had valley temples. Therefore the great Sphinx Temple is the valley temple of the Second Pyramid, the tomb of Cephren. Moreover, the dispute as to the date of the great diorite statue of Cephren and of the Sphinx itself was finally settled, for exactly the characteristics of the Cephren statue and the Sphinx which were supposed to be of later date were found in the newly unearthed statues.

LEGAL BLUNDERS.

A Queer Decree of Divorce Issued by a Paris Court.

Some years ago, it is said, a legal blunder of a most extraordinary character was committed in one of the divorce courts in Paris. By some misapprehension on the part of the presiding judge, whose papers and mind had got confused, he actually mistook the name of an advocate who had been arguing a petition for the name of the petitioner himself and in granting and signing the decree of dissolution of marriage of the petitioner unwittingly substituted the advocate's name for the petitioner's and thus divorced the lawyer from his wife instead of granting the prayed for release of the advocate's client. As the lawyer had no desire for separation from his wife and as there was no process for annulling an absolute decree for divorce, even to meet such a remarkable case, it became necessary through this judicial error for the man of law to remarry his spouse without delay, and this he did.

A somewhat similar error was committed in the English court of chancery. There had been a litigation over the property, which was held by one man and claimed by another of the same name. In evading some order of the court the holder of the property had committed a contempt, and on this being called to the attention of the judge an order issued for the summoning, not of the guilty party, but of the claimant of the same surname, and the order, a very severe one, was actually in execution before the error was discovered.—New York Press.

BOOKS IN OLD ROME.

Trained Slave Copyists Turned Them Out Quick and Cheap.

There were in Augustan Rome established publishing houses which not only turned out large numbers of books, but many editions of them and at an incredibly small price. That their arrangements were businesslike may be inferred from the testimony of Horace, who related that when an author failed to please the metropolis the publishers shipped the entire edition of his works to the provinces, and if he still failed as a writer they made arrangements to bring them back again and sell them, as paper to the pastry and spice shops.

One great firm in Rome had over 2,000 trained slave copyists, and their work was swift and cheap, for Martial writes that they had ready an edition of a thousand copies of his "Epigrams" in just one hour, to be sold at 10 cents a copy. The exceedingly large reading public which all this indicates must have been many years in growing, and one may assume that Rome had long been a city of readers. Atticus, the publisher of Cicero, had a great many modern methods in the conduct of his business, and the fact that Cicero's "Commentaries" were very quickly dispatched to the outposts of civilization shows that the machinery of distribution was also well organized. Thus we may conclude that the advertising and publicity department was in good shape.—Bookman.

Husky Dogs of Labrador.

All along the coast at every Eskimo encampment and about the cabins of the liveyeres are numbers of husky dogs. In winter these animals pull the sledges and form the sole means of travel or communication from settlement to settlement. During the summer they are not fed by their owners, but are left to seek their sustenance as best they can; hence the hungry brutes range the land near the coast and add to the problems of Labrador, as they permit no creature to live that they can pull down. If a horse were to be turned out to graze overnight only its bare bones would be found in the morning. Even human beings they are sometimes dangerous when night begins to fall, and on occasion when hard driven by hunger they have been known to attack children in the day. Considering they are hardly ever fed in the summer, one only wonders that there are not more ill deeds to set to their account. —Wide World Magazine.

THE DAY OF THE SASH.

It Has Come Again, Bringing In Elaborate Creations.

SASH OF FLOWERED RIBBON.

When it was announced in Paris that fashion leaders had sanctioned the revival of sashes every girl who had an heirloom in the shape of an old embroidered sash congratulated herself, but, alas, while we are to have sashes it is "with a difference." The new sashes fasten snugly around the waist while the sash ends fall in all sorts of elaborate bows and folds. Some sashes are cut with double streamers like the one in the picture, which is of flowered ribbon and lace fringed with silk tassels.

The new sash is quite as intricate as the jabot and needs the same trained hand to give it the proper finish. Sash and girdle arrangements are of many kinds. Big bows and long, wide scarf ends of black mallines appear on some of the light based models. The new velvet with taffeta back in color is effectively used for sash effects, a wide end in two loops lying flat, one over the other, but of different lengths, being a popular method of using the velvet ribbon or satin. This gives much the effect of the detached skirt panel and breaks the tight skirt line in the back without introducing any odd fancy.

over a plain little dress of this material, or it can grace a silk or satin gown for evening. It is folded around the shoulders, crossed in front and fastened at the back in a small butterfly bow or under a cabochon, from which a square flat court train falls.

This fichu can be of plain linen, hemstitched and used in flat simplicity.

Made From Towels.

A simple and useful rumbling jacket or peignoir may be made from a good large towel. Divide it into four even parts, cut off two of these parts near the ends and sew them at right angles to the central portion. Sew tape where the pieces join to tie the peignoir on.

From three crash dish towels you can make a sewing apron, turning up the bottom and stitching it into pockets. Ribbon strings complete the apron.

A large embroidered towel will make a good bureau cover for summer. A line of drawn work will add to the appearance of a plain one used for the same purpose.

1867-1911

Saturday, July 1st, will be the birthday of the Canadian nation. On July 1st the Dominion of Canada will enter upon its forty-fifth year. On that date we celebrate the day that made Canada out of a mere congeries of separate and often hostile localities. The day will be duly honored by every Canadian, not only in every city, town and hamlet of the Dominion, but by Canadians the world over. It is a day for rejoicing, and it is a day also for sober patriotic thought. It is the duty of every Canadian to take thought for the country's future, and to be mindful, too, of the lessons of the country's history.

Forty-four years ago on Saturday the British North American act went into force uniting under one central government the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, then known respectively as Upper and Lower Canada, and the two maritime provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The fathers of the Confederation were inspired by a deep loyalty to Great Britain. But they laid the foundation of a structure infinitely greater than they could imagine. Had the Confederation of Canada not taken place, British North America would have remained a number of separate and probably greatly discontented and jealous territories, under the guidance of a state on the other side of the Atlantic. Since the first Dominion day, the scattered communities with apparently nothing in common but their British connection, which in those days constituted Great Britain's colonial possessions on this continent, have been united into a sturdy young nation, self-reliant, but at the same time proud to form part of the Great British empire.

Without bloodshed, without ill-feeling, out of the most diverse elements and widely differing conditions, Canada was built into a nation, the hearts of all whose citizens, upon the national questions, beat as one. So far as the future of Canada is concerned, this national spirit is strong enough to resist all attacks upon the integrity of the country, if any such attacks were likely to be made. In the West it seems ridiculous to say this, but it has to be said on behalf of the West to those feeble-minded people who are always imagining that some mysterious agency is going to strip the West from Canada or the whole of Canada from the British empire.

The whole Dominion has made wonderful progress in the development of its resources, in the building up of industries, and the creation of wealth and prosperity which is widely diffused throughout all classes of the Canadian people. Those who, twenty or thirty years ago, could see no great future ahead of Western Canada have had their misgivings overwhelmingly disposed of. They could not foresee the triumphs of courage and enterprise, which have so splendidly refuted their pessimistic reflections, nor imagine the transformation of the desolation upon which their thoughts dwelt into a land of unprecedented abundance and prosperity. Let us be thankful that we are living in the midst of the most sanguine expectations of the men who laid the foundations of the Dominion. Let us be proud that we are part of the greatest empire on earth and let us celebrate the 1st of July with an enthusiasm in which national feeling and Imperial sentiment are harmoniously blended.

Editorial Notes

Canada—the brightest national gem in the British crown.

With the settlement of the coal miners' strike, The Pass will go ahead with leaps and bounds.

The heavy rains of the past week have caused a smile on the farmers' countenances that won't very easily come off.

One day last week while we were passing along the main street at Coleman, a number of men were wondering as to who would resume the publication of the Coleman Miner, and when a Slav, member of the defunct Slav Miners' union, mentioned a name which sounded like "Brandon," the crowd laughed loud and long.

We often hear complimentary remarks regarding this paper, but the many nice things that have reached our ears in reference to our last week's editorial on "The Strike Situation," which appeared on the front page, have indeed been numerous. This is an other proof that Socialism, more properly termed "Anarchism," is waning in this district and that the miners do not approve of the tactics played by some of their Socialist friends.

The name of "Brandon" recalls to many minds sad and unpleasant memories of the past. There is a Brandon in Manitoba which is noted for its lunatic asylum, and there is also a Brandon in some town near the International boundary line, regarding whose notoriety we would advise you, gentle reader, to ask the Coleman people.

Coleman Notes

The Coleman Miner was sold by deputy sheriff, J. W. Gresham, on Saturday morning last. T. B. Brandon was not there but his ghost was in evidence.

A splendid celebration was held here on Coronation day. About noon over two hundred boys and girls and several hundred grown-up persons met near the school grounds where the hopefuls were presented by C. P. Willimott with beautiful coronation medals made of aluminum and nicely stamped on both sides. After this was done, councillor Clark, who so well succeeded in placing the children in line and forming a long procession, led the crowd to Flummerfelt Park where Mayor Cameron delivered an able address and one that was well suited for the occasion. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in listening to the band, watching the football matches, etc. In the evening a concert was given in the Opera house. This was followed by a dance. The day was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and Coleman is to be congratulated on being the only town in The Pass that held a coronation celebration. Thanks to the interest taken in the children and town by Mayor Cameron.

A Pleasant Event

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium on Monday evening last when Miss E. Olson entertained a number of her young friends to a birthday party. After the hostess had met about a dozen of her guests in the parlor and after she had received the hearty congratulations and best wishes of them all, the happy pairs betook themselves to the dining room where a dinner of a very elaborate nature was partaken of and thoroughly enjoyed. The following toasts were then made:

"The King and Queen"—proposed by Rev. W. T. Young, responded to by C. Dellis

"The Ladies"—proposed by R. W. Thompson, responded to by A. J. Hollmotz.

"Our Mothers"—proposed by W. J. Bartlett, responded to by J. C. Boudreau.

"Our Town"—proposed by C. Dellis, responded to by J. D. S. Barrett.

"Our Country"—proposed by J. C. Boudreau, responded to by Rev. W. T. Young.

"The Press"—proposed by J. D. S. Barrett, responded to by W. J. Bartlett.

Miss Olson was presented with a gold watch and fob, Miss Sunstrum making the presentation, while J. D. S. Barrett, who proposed the toast to "Our Hostess" read the following address which was responded to by A. J. Hollmotz:

DEAR MISS OLSON,—Birthdays may be called the milestones in life's journey, and as you reach another of these anniversary land marks to-day, permit us your surrounding circle of friends, to congratulate you on having travelled them thus far in safety and to wish you with all our hearts, many similar opportunities of receiving your friends.

We hope every year of your future life will find you still happier than the last, that the years will glide happily away without care or sorrow. May your road of happiness be lighted by Godliness. May your lamp of friendship ever be supplied by the oil of truth and fidelity. May you never have false friends who, like shadows keep close to us in the sunshine only to desert us on a cloudy day. May you be lavished with the good things of the world. And when the furrowed streaks of grey gather about thy temples, when length of years make thee tired of earthly joys and when the curtains of death gently close around the last scene of thy existence, may the angels of God attend thy bed and take care that the expiring lamp of life shall not receive one rude blast to hasten its extinction, and, finally, may the Saviour's blood wash thee from all impurities and at last usher thee into the land of everlasting felicity.

While we heartily congratulate you upon having successfully reached another milestone along the pleasant journey of life, it is with real sorrow that we learn of your near departure from Frank and The Pass. During your short stay in this town we have known you as a lady of amiable habits and of refined culture, possessing many graces of mind and person, and it is with sincere and unmitigated regret that we do hereby desire to express to you in words that can hardly portray our thoughts, the kind and courteous manner in which you have acted towards all with whom you have come in contact. You need no eulogy, you speak for yourself.

We wish you long life and bespeak for you much happiness. We hope that ere long the attractions of this town will lure you back and that you will return for a long stay amongst us to again cast your heavenly influence for good in this community.

We ask you to accept this token as a small mark of our esteem and unswerving friendship. May it always convey to you sweet remembrances of the past. And when your own star shall sit at life's close may it not go down upon the darkening West, but may it melt away into that haven of light where parting is never known and where you may spend a never-ending year in love and harmony."

The pleasant party repaired to the parlor about 10 p.m. where an enjoyable time was spent until Father Time moved the long hand of the clock to the hour of twelve, when all left for their respective homes.

A career of great distinction was ended at Winnipeg on Saturday morning last when the death occurred of Hon. T. Mayne Daly, P.C., K.C., police magistrate and judge of the juvenile court of Winnipeg and former minister of the interior.

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Cheshire

A pleasant time was spent in the Central Baptist church on Friday evening last in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cheshire who have since left for England. Refreshments were served after which a presentation of a set of ink wells was made to Mrs. Cheshire by the ladies of the Blairmore branch of the W. C. T. U. The following addre s was then read:

"The members of the W. C. T. U., of Blairmore. To Mrs. Arthur Cheshire.

DEAR SISTER,

It is with much sorrow and regret that we have learned of your immediate departure from us.

You were with us at the initial meeting and organization of our union in this town and you are also one of its charter members and its secretary.

From the beginning you entered with enthusiasm into the work of the union and through your assistance it has accomplished much. We feel that your place cannot be readily filled and we will miss you much.

We pray that you and Mr. Cheshire may have a safe and pleasant journey to your old home, and that the bands that bind you here in Canada may be strong enough to bring you back again.

We present you with this inkstand as a small token of our regard for you, and may the blessing of the Most High God rest upon you and yours.

In behalf of the W. C. T. U. of Blairmore.

MRS. F. M. PINKNEY, Pres.
MRS. R. HOWE, V. Pres.
MRS. (Rev.) J. F. HUNTER."

The address which is annexed was read to Mr. Cheshire by Alex. McLean after which W. J. Gresham on behalf of the church, presented Mr. Cheshire with a suit case and a toilet set.

The members of Central Baptist church.

To Mr. Arthur Cheshire.

DEAR BRO.,—

With deep regret we have learned that you are soon to depart from our midst. We had hoped that you would continue with us.

We desire to express our appreciation of your splendid work for this church as its treasurer and organist. Your financial ability, untiring energy, earnest enthusiasm and cheerful liberality will not soon be forgotten by us. We know we will miss you.

We wish Mrs. Cheshire and yourself bon voyage in your journey to the old homestead, and we hope it will not be long till we see you again amongst us.

As a small token of esteem and of our appreciation for your success so freely given we present you with this suit case and may God's richest blessing rest upon you both.

In behalf of the church.

An Easy Case

The Plan That Was Devised to Catch a Crook

By JOHN D. JONES

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When I went into the detective business in Albany, N. Y., I took service with a firm that was managed by a very experienced man. He had the reputation of having cornered more crooks than any detective living. I was anxious to show him what I could do and soon found an admirable opportunity.

There had been a bank robbery, and $10,000 in bills had been taken from the bank. A few days later on, reporting at the office, my chief said to me:

"We're on the track of the man who robbed the —th National, and I wish you to nab him. We've been watching the trains leaving the city ever since the robbery was committed for any suspicious person trying to get away. The consequence is that our quarry hasn't dared to try it. But he's been given away. If these rascals would only treat the women they take up with decency we would not catch so many of them. I have a letter, evidently written by a woman, stating that Andy Sims, alias Charley Jenkins, alias Trusty Joe, is the man who robbed the bank and that he has planned to leave the city by the 10 o'clock train tomorrow morning for New York. He will be accompanied by his mother. He has engaged passage under a fictitious name on the Northumbria for Southampton. The money he took from the bank will be carried in his boots. Take Horton with you and look out for an old woman and a young man. Of course he'll be disguised."

Horton and I loitered beside the train before it left the station, keeping a sharp eye on every one who got aboard. A few minutes before leaving time a woman whom my practiced eye told me had been "made up" came toward the cars, but instead of getting aboard stood looking back anxiously as if expecting some one. Presently a well dressed young man came hurrying in to the station, passed by the woman, went to a forward car and jumped aboard. Although not a glance passed between him and the woman, the moment she saw him she went into the coach and took a seat.

I ran forward to where Horton was watching, described the young man referred to and told him to keep a sharp eye on him.

"Everything is working well," I said, "but keep your wits about you and don't make a move until you have good reason to do so. If you nab the wrong man the right one may get away while your attention is taken up on a false scent."

While I was giving these instructions the train moved out. Horton stepped aboard, and as soon as my car reached me I did the same. The woman was sitting apparently unconcerned, but she couldn't conceal from me the fact that she was striving with a hidden emotion. Her bosom was heaving and her eye was restless. She kept rearranging her belongings on the seat, and I was quite sure she was doing so in order to help her to retain her composure. One thing that especially gave her away was her constantly opening a hand bag, taking out a bottle of smelling salts and using it.

I had no doubt the young man who got aboard the forward car was our quarry, but I didn't propose to lose sight of the woman, thinking that she might have some of the swag on her person. But since the most important part of the matter seemed to lie in the man in front I went forward, took Horton's place and told him to go back and take mine. The train was scheduled to stop but once between Albany and New York, and that was at Poughkeepsie. Since we were moving at the rate of fifty miles an hour there was no chance for any one to get off until we reached that station.

I seated myself facing the young man I was to watch, and, taking a photograph of Andy Sims, obtained from the rogues' gallery, from my pocket, compared it with the suspect's face. The moment I did so I was sure I was on the right track. His features were more delicate than those of the photograph, but the latter had been taken in rough clothes, while the suspect was very well dressed. This would have a tendency to make his appear more refined.

The chief had advised that an arrest, if made, should occur at the New York end of the line. In the first place it would give us more time to look about us and thus be more certain of what we were doing. In the second place, we might need to keep more than one suspected person under surveillance and follow one man to the steamer. We had telegraphed to New York to have a couple of men at the station to do my bidding.

The only weak spot in this plan was the stop at Poughkeepsie. I told Horton that if the woman got out there to arrest her, and I would do the same with the man. But we didn't believe either would do so because I had learned from the conductor that both had tickets to New York. Before we reached Poughkeepsie my suspect had thrown down a newspaper he had been reading and dropped asleep, real or pretended. He didn't awake while we were at the station, but as soon as the train started he jumped up and made a dive for the car door.

Of course I followed him. He shut the door in my face, and time was required to open it. When I got off he was running like a deer through the station. From there he ran along the track northward, and as there was no favorable outlet on either side of him he was obliged to run under my full view. I called to him to stop, and he did so at once without my firing a shot and surrendered very tamely. I clapped the bracelets on him and waited for the next train to return to Albany.

While doing so I ordered him to take off his boots, expecting to find the bills in them, as we had been advised by the woman who had given him away. I was disappointed in finding nothing. I noticed that he had a very small foot. There were other things about him that led me to fear I had got the wrong man. But he seemed to have expected his arrest, and the circumstances taken altogether were so overwhelmingly in favor of the theory that he was the man I wanted that I gave the matter little thought. I believed now that the woman who was under Horton's care had the loot, and my anxiety was all in that direction.

I took my man to Albany and gave the chief an account of the circumstances of the capture as far as I knew them. Nothing had been heard from Horton. The chief ordered a search made of our captive. He was handed over to a couple of the force for the purpose and taken into a private room. Presently one of them came out with a broad grin on his face.

"We don't care to go any further in that matter," he said. "If you want that young fellow searched you'd better call in a woman."

"Why?" I asked, astonished.

"Because he's a woman himself."

The chief looked at me thunderstruck, then with an expression of contempt ordered that my catch be held till Horton should be heard from, after which, if Horton had no success, she should be discharged.

"Just you wait," I said, a good deal irritated; "this thing is a game. The woman Horton is watching has got the property on her. I'll warrant."

"This one," replied the chief sneeringly, "has turned out to be a woman. I'll bet the other turns out to be a man."

As he spoke a telegram was handed in. It proved to be from Horton and simply said that he would be with us by the next return train. That was the longest wait I ever had in my life. When he came in his countenance showed what was of course to be expected—failure.

He told us that when the train stopped at Poughkeepsie the woman he was watching went into the saloon and locked the door. If Horton waited in the car for her to unlock the door she might make her escape through the car window. If he went out on to the platform to watch from the outside she might unlock the saloon door, come out and leave the car by the ordinary passage. While he was trying to make up his mind what to do the train started on. He ran out on to the platform of the coach, but saw no woman. As soon as he could get a trainman to do the work the saloon door was forced. The window was open and some woman's clothes were on the floor.

Sims was subsequently captured and a considerable part of the loot with him. He said his sister had planned the whole thing for him. She had written the letter giving the information respecting the departure and the train by which he would leave. He had dressed himself as a woman, not taking pains to conceal the fact that he "was made up." The sister had dressed herself as a man and purposely misled us, jumping off the train, hoping to divert attention from the brother. Sims had the swag on his person and hoped to walk out of the train while we were following his sister. My setting a watch on him was a disappointment. Noticing Horton's eyes fixed on him, he realized that he was under observation, and the idea of escaping through the saloon had occurred to him. His woman's dress had been put on over his man's clothes, with a view to being taken off quickly.

I learned a great deal by this fiasco, but one must always keep learning and never get perfectly taught. I made up my mind after my slip not again to wait before making an arrest of a suspicious person. But my very next case taught me that there is danger in acting too quickly, just as there is in acting too slowly. I pounced upon a man, thinking he was my quarry, and while I was making the arrest the one I wanted slipped out through a back door. Since these two cases I have learned to do my best, and when I make a failure I put it down to bad luck.

NEXT DOOR'S FRUIT TREE.

The One Whose Branches Extend Over the Fence Into Your Yard.

The next door fruit tree, growing so near the line that laden branches extend over the fence, has proved a source of untold spankings to the small boy, quarrels between otherwise good neighbors and even resort to the police courts. One is inclined to suspect that the original apple tree of trouble hung over a neighbor's fence.

The cause of friction is, of course, the question of the ownership of or at least the right to take and use the fruit on the too widely spread branches. Generally this fruit is claimed by the person whose property is thus invaded, but if he asserts this claim to the point of gathering the fruit without permission he may feel the iron hand of the law, says Harper's Weekly. If he objects to the presence of the branches which extend over his property he may cut them or the tree must remove them. But if the owner of the tree applies for the fruit or asks permission to enter and take it the owner of the land over which the branches extend cannot refuse permission for entry for this purpose. If he refuses either to hand over the fruit or to allow the owner of the tree to enter and take it, then the owner of the tree may enter without permission, but he must use no force nor commit any damage in so entering.

Certainly the most neighborly thing to do would be to divide that fruit.

INDEXING BOOKS.

The Custom Is an Old One That Developed Rather Slowly.

The custom of indexing books developed gradually. Cicero used the word "index," but in the sense of a table of contents. Seneca provided some works which he sent to a friend with notes of particular passages, "so that he who only aimed at the useful might be spared the trouble of examining them entire." This was at least a partial "index" in the modern sense. Annotated, or at least explanatory, tables of contents seem to have preceded the index proper.

Such tables followed the order of appearance of the subjects in the book itself. Alphabetical arrangement, which was the beginning of the real index, appears not to have been thought of until the invention of printing, and even then it spread but slowly. Erasmus was one of the first to provide his works with alphabetical indexes. The custom did not become universal until well into the sixteenth century.

The first index to an English book is said to be that printed in Polydore Vergil's "Anglise Historiae," in 1546. An edition of this work published ten years later has an index of thirty-seven pages.

Stories of Wellington and Blucher.

I once met Wellington at dinner. He was then much aged, talked gravely and with great distinctness, ate but little, drank no wine and left early. He was a member of the Union club when I joined it, and I have heard a story that he became a member of Crockford's, the famous gambling resort, that he might blackball his sons if they became candidates.

I remember the touching anecdote of how he and that old Prussian warrior Blucher met upon the field of Waterloo and mingled their tears over the bodies of the slain. The well known and much more probable story is told of Blucher that, having been entertained at a city dinner and thoroughly enjoying its sumptuous hospitality, he delighted his hosts by his admiration of London, concluding, however, with the startling exclamation, "What a splendid city it would be to sack!"—From Sergeant Ballantine's Experiences.

"I Don't Think."

Many correspondents have traced "I don't think" through many writers and speakers. But this writer, who has the habit of reading the Bible in bed the last thing at night, suddenly came upon the seventeenth chapter of St. Luke and the parable of the servant who merely did his duty: "Doth he thank that servant because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not." Now, the Greek words are simply these in modern characters, "Ou doko," which mean just "I don't think." Anyhow we cannot get better authority for the use of the expression which Christ employed in one of those lightning sketches he threw out as he walked and talked.—London Chronicle.

Tolstoy's Thoughts on Death.

The fear of death is unnatural. The fear of death is the consciousness of sin.

The fear of death emanates from the fact that people regard as life only a small part of it, limited by their own erroneous conception.

Just as the owner of the fig tree knows the time when the fruit is ripe, so God knows when to call the righteous from this world.

Strive to keep your life at a point where you neither fear death nor desire it.—Tolstoy's "Cycle of Readings."

The Helpful Waiter.

Contemptuous Waiter (who can stand it no longer)—Scuse me, sir; you don't seem able to get all that soup hup with your spoon. Shall I get you a piece of blotting paper?—London Tit-Bits.

Nicotine and Nervousness.

"Does tobacco make a man nervous?"

"It is likely to," replied the physician, "if his wife objects to his smoking."—Exchange.

COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOWS BEFORE THEM.

Extraordinary Disturbances of the Globe and Vagrant Stars Which Seem to Herald and Accompany Waves of Pestilence Have Always Been a Matter of Interest to Philosophers—Black Death Foretold.

A great mystery which stretches far back into the musty archives of the past, first recorded in the Scriptural accounts of the plagues which came up out of Egypt, is angering the fires of white light of learned inquiry to the far east where Death and all his allies stalk through the land. That "coming events cast their shadows before them," has been duly emphasized through all the ages by the baleful consequences following the tokens of nature's trail—the dire heralding of doom by our mythological guardians that swing through heaven's blue dome.

The history of successive visitations of the great plague as they relate to disturbances of the physical globe presents points of some interest. So late as the beginning of the last century there were those who fancied with credulous terrors the planetary vagaries which were observed to have coincided with such calamities.

The recurrent waves of pestilence which swept over Europe and Asia before and during the middle ages, leaving death in its wake, were heralded and accompanied with extraordinary disturbances of the globe. Rome fell a prey to its ravages with appalling frequency. The first grave visitation occurred in 366 B.C., when the plague broke out with devastating severity and continued to rage for three years. Ten thousand died in a day at its height; the living were scarcely able to dispose of the dead.

Disturbing omens had been observed; dismay filled the populace; the gods must be appeased. And so, the stricken city saw games were instituted and a ghastly levity ordained. The statues of Apollo, Latona, Diana, Hercules, Mercury and Neptune were placed on three couches and loaded with the richest viands for a space of eight days. But, as the event proved, all was of no avail; the dead still obstructed the open ways; the air was an offence in the nostrils. They might as well have appointed a cooks' holiday. At last some of the more ancient Romans recalled a picture custom fallen into disuse; a nail was driven into Jupiter's temple during the ides of September.

The next year Rome was rent by an earthquake of great violence; a fissure opened in the midst of the city. The gods, it was thought, had given a hint; they were weary of baked meats and desired a living sacrifice. Accordingly the dauntless M. Curtius, whose name happily has been preserved to posterity, hurled himself in the chasm, imploring the perverse deities to restore prosperity to the Roman world. Writers recalled after the plague had spent its force that a flaming star had made its appearance, preceded by a terrific tidal wave which inundated two cities on the Gulf of Corinth.

Again, in 126 B.C., the pestilence fell upon Rome. A baleful planet has risen above the African land. At first, says Seneca, it appeared fiery and red, emitting a bright light so as to overcome the darkness of night. Gradually its magnitude lessened and its brightness paled. In the year 1.4 Ætna was in eruption, and nine years later the phenomenon was repeated. Multitudinous hordes of locusts, hounded by a south wind, drove up from Numidia and Utica, obscuring the sun. The havoc wrought was unprecedented. It is related that 80,000 died in Numidia and 230,000 more on the sea coast of Carthage. Fifteen hundred bodies were carried out of a single gate at Utica in one day. Thirty thousand Roman troops were numbered among the victims.

But this visitation was to be followed by one still more appalling in the sixth century of our era. Contemporary writers said that it had "depopulated" Africa; it swept the whole Roman world. So swift and terrible was the action of the disease that men who rose well in the morning were stricken before noon; they fell at games, at table, while they were conversing. St. Gregory instituted a procession at Rome on account of the unparalleled calamity. No less than 80 Romans fell dead in the streets while it was passing.

For this plague, too, we find a reason in the planetary disturbances. In 555 A.D. Antioch was overthrown by an earthquake in which 10,000 perished; the Tiber left its bed and overflowed the streets of Rome; a comet made its appearance; the winter was rigorous; the drought which followed severe. The times were obviously out of joint.

The black death, which was pulmonary, like the present epidemic, is supposed the have originated in Asia in 1345. Genoese sailors, who landed at their home port early in 1348 from the eastern coast of the Black Sea, are supposed to have carried it with them, together with miraculous stories of its origin. They said its coming had been foretold in Cathay by the bursting of a huge globe of fire and a voice proclaiming them that the fire had burst through the shell of the globe from below. Seismic shocks of an identical violence and extent had shaken all Europe. Germany suffered in 1346; in 1349 Sicily, together with Italy, was shaken to its foundation; many cities were wrecked in Greece, and thousands were swallowed up by the earth. The courses of rivers were obstructed, and over Avignon (then the home of the popes) a meteor hung suspended for an hour. The heavens were thick with vapors and shot with strange lights.

The great plague of London, which appeared in 1664, was similarly announced by uncanny natural phenomena. How the plague reached London, if, indeed, it did not originate there, remains a mystery.

Courts-martial in Britain are regulated by the Mutiny Act, first passed in 1690.

SADDEST ROOM IN LONDON.

Where Bereaved People Gather at "No. 44."

The saddest room in London—No. 44 Somerset House—will lose a well-known figure shortly, when Mr. James Russell retires.

No. 44 is one of the rooms in the Wills and Probate Department of Somerset House—the room set apart for personal applications, where no lawyer or "any person acting as advisor is allowed to enter.

All day long in No. 44 a group of sad people, widows and widowers and bereaved sons and daughters, sit patiently around an oblong table endeavoring with Mr. Russell's kindly aid and advice, to fill up the long schedules which show in detail their "little all."

Correspondence with Mr. Russell's office is not allowed. The personal note is the feature of the office, and business can only be transacted with the applicant in person.

One day recently seven recently-bereaved widows were sitting around the table in the office endeavoring, with unaccustomed pens, to make out full and complete lists of what was left them to face the world with. Mr. Russell was playing the part of schoolmaster with the gentle friendly air of the old family solicitor.

One old lady, after forty years of matrimony, whose fingers were twisted and gnarled with hard work and rheumatism, was trying to find £33 in the figure column as representing her late husband's savings of a lifetime locked up in the savings bank.

"I never could manage them threes," she said, after an earnest struggle and a friendly hand stole over hers to guide the poor old fingers through the intricacies of the figure 3.

Machinery Talk.

I stood in the works at midnight, and all was still as the grave, till the flies, with rasping accents, defiling discordance gave. "Now, what's the use of living," he said, with his teeth firm set, "when life is made up of rubbing 'gainst all the hard things I've met?"

Then answered the lathe in pity, "I've done some hard turns myself." "What the worm-gear?" the shuttle grunted, "And they've put me on the shelf." "Life is a bore," said the gimlet. "Aye, with many a broken thread," said the hollow voice of the steam-pipe, as a condensed tear he shed.

Then the emery-wheel growled roughly, "A continual grind, I say." "But watch and wait," said the fly-wheel, who had damaged herself that day. "I shall start a revolution in about a week or so." "Look sharp, then," rejoined the chisel, "you're cutting it rather slow." "Oh, she's cracked," said the soldering fluid, as his face he acidly shaped; and in the confusion which followed, I regret that the gas escaped.

It Is a Remarkable Watch.

The Czar owns what is said to be a very remarkable watch made by a Polish mechanic named Adam Czurny. The Czar had heard some wonderful tales about the inventive ability of this man, and wishing personally to test his skill, he sent him a parcel containing a few copper nails, some wood chippings, a piece of broken glass, an old cracked china cup, some wire and a few cribbage-board pegs. Accompanying this was a command to make them into a timepiece. Within a remarkably short time the Czar received them back in the shape of a watch. The case was made of china, and the works of the other odds and ends. So pleased and astonished was the Czar that he sent for the man and conferred several distinctions upon him.

Germany Subsidizes Drama.

In Germany there are 20 subsidized court theatres and nearly 100 theatres subsidized by municipalities. In many cases the theatre is granted to its director rent free, in others a subsidy is also given. In some cases the cost of the scenery, costumes, and the heating and lighting are borne by the town. There is great variety in method and in degree but the result is that throughout Germany the art of the drama is officially recognized, and the theatre is regarded as an essential factor in the town's life, resulting in several theatres giving varied classical and modern plays throughout the German empire.

Saves a Lot of Trouble.

They do things picturesquely in Japan. When a young Jap has made up his mind as to the maiden he desires to wed, his next step is to fasten to a branch of a certain shrub to the house of the lady's parents. Should he prove a welcome suitor, the branch is cut down, and taken in, while if unacceptable it is left to wither and die.

Putting It Off.

Tess—He proposed to me to-day, and he was so impatient that he wanted me to marry him right away. But I was not to be hurried.

Jess—So you put him off, eh?

Tess—Yes, indeed. I told him he'd have to wait until to-morrow.

Unaffected.

Miss Spelts—Of course no one could truthfully speak of her as pretty.

Mr. Lovesick—Well—er—perhaps not, but she has such a quiet, unaffected manner.

Miss Spelts—Yes, but it has taken her several years to acquire it.

To Bake Potatoes With Gas.

Here is a hint to some one using gas. If you wish to bake potatoes, take a cover from your other stove, put potatoes on this and turn a deep agate dish over them. This saves the gas and they bake very nice; do not turn the gas too high.

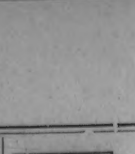

Her Conclusion.

"If you were asked to name the handsomest man in the room, whom would you choose?"

"Well," she answered looking about "I believe I should have to admit that he isn't here to-night."

Cookery Points

Giving a Luncheon.

An important point to remember always in entertaining is that it is not nearly as important to serve many courses or much in each course as to serve everything very prettily and take infinite pains in the garnishing of the different dishes and the way that they are passed and served.

Here is a suitable menu: Grapefruit cut in halves, the fruit scooped out carefully, the tough membrane and seeds removed and the fruit flavored with lemon juice and powdered sugar and a little maraschino, if you wish, and put back into the halves with a few candied cherries used for decoration on top of each half. This course should be ice cold, and each half should rest on a plate with a doily and be eaten with an orange spoon or teaspoon.

For a second course have bouillon in cups, but do not have croutons; they are not en regle at a luncheon. It would be superfluous to have the orange juice, oyster and bouillon. Orange juice by itself would be rather an unusual course, and it would not be advisable, and oysters on the half shell are seldom seen now at a luncheon. The grapefruit will not cost any more than the other two courses and is exactly the thing for the first course.

Creamed salmon in ramekins served individually will be correct for the fish and third course, and brown bread sandwiches, the bread cut very thin and the sandwiches in fancy shapes, will be a good addition.

Halves of broiled chicken served on toast with currant jelly, potato croquettes and green peas or French string beans will be all right for the substantial course, but it would not do at all to have chops afterward. Omit that course altogether; the birds are enough for the meat course.

Roman punch may come after the birds, served individually in punch glasses or ice molds. Waldorf salad served in apples, with cream cheese, heated crackers and barle-duc jelly will make a good salad course. Do not pass olives with it. If they are served they should be a separate course, coming between the bouillon and fish. They should be passed with radishes, celery stalks and salted nuts. A strawberry shortcake would be a better dessert than ice cream, or you might serve a frozen pudding with a sauce if you prefer it to strawberry shortcake. As a final course have bonbons and fruit and serve coffee in demitasses in the parlor after luncheon.

Chocolate passed in cups with whipped cream on top would be correct if it is liked. The chocolate cups and saucers should be removed when the table is cleared for dessert. If an additional course is desired have between the fish and fowl fried sweetbreads with green peas and have some other vegetable with the birds.

The oyster fork may be put on the oyster plate or at the left of the cover at the head of the other forks, put a little shallow, or individual, fork by the forks. The knives are always put on the right of the cover. With the menu given above you will need only one knife for the birds and a small silver knife for the salad course, for the cheese and bare-duc. Have the table prettily decorated with spring flowers and bonbons and decorations to match.

Lobster Novelties.

The hostess who is tired of plain lobster salad, lobster farci or lobster Newburg will find a pleasant change in lobster cocktail as a first course. In fried lobster for a fish course and in creamed lobster on toast as main dish for a family lunch as well as a fish course.

For the cocktail cut the meat of boiled lobster into good sized pieces—about half the size of an oyster—and serve in a sauce made of a tablespoonful each of Worcestershire sauce, tomato ketchup and lemon juice, flavored highly with cayenne, a drop or two of tabasco, salt and a teaspoonful of fresh grated horseradish.

Mix the lobster in this sauce and let it stand on ice until well chilled, serve in glasses like the oyster cocktail. Instead of the ketchup a pleasant change is made by using chili sauce or Oscar sauce in the dressing.

Cut as big and shapely pieces as you can get for the fried lobster, which is first boiled, then dipped in egg and cracker crumbs, fry in boiling fat just before serving and drain on brown paper. Serve with a hollandaise sauce, to which are added chopped olives and a little onion juice, or with a sauce tartare mixed with fresh peas.

Have boiled lobster flesh that is to be served on toast and marinate in a little lemon juice for a few minutes. In the meantime make a rich cream dressing or white sauce, highly seasoned with cayenne and a few drops of onion. Add the lobster to the hot sauce. Let it simmer only for five minutes and serve at once on hot buttered toast.

Celery Toast.

Cream a tablespoonful of butter, one of flour and one-half teaspoonful salt and add three cups of milk. Cook until it thickens and then add one-half cupful of chopped celery which has been cooked until tender. Pour over squares of buttered toast and serve hot.

WESTERN FARMERS PROFITS IN TEN YEARS

He Pays Only $35 per Year in Duties on Implements—What 640 Acres Can Do.

A farmer writing to a Toronto daily paper from Indian Head, Saskatchewan, under the nom de plume, Saskatchewan Farmer, refutes the statement made by many Westerners, that the farmers of the West have been ill-used by the Dominion Government which is identified largely with Eastern interests. This Saskatchewan farmer gives a typical instance of the expenditure and revenue connected with a section of land, 640 acres, from the year 1900 to 1910. He says:

"I will give you an idea of what a section of land, 640 acres; will earn and how it will increase in value in the most favored wheat producing districts of Saskatchewan under normal conditions, from 1900 to 1910, allowing the average price of land to be $10 per acre for that period. In so doing it should be borne in mind that 30 per cent. of the land in this province was Free Grant.

Capital Expenditure

Land, 640 acres at $10 per acre		$6,400.00
Cultivation, 440 acres at $6 per acre		2,640.00
Dwelling house		2,000.00
Stable for 12 horses, granary and implement shed		3,000.00
1910.
12 horses and harness		3,000.00
Implements.	Duty
3 seed drills	$33.00	330.00
3 plows	30.50	210.00
2 disc harrows	10.00	80.00
2 sub-section harrows	8.50	60.00
3 7-ft. binders	53.00	465.00
4 wagons, complete	72.00	360.00
One-sixth interest in thresher	125.00	500.00
Extras, say	20.00	455.00
	$350.00	$18,000.00
Crop for 10 years $40 per acre at 25 bush. to the acre, at 75 cents.		$75.000.00
Working expenses for 10 years at $5 per acre		$32,000.00
Interest on capital for ten years at 6 per cent.		10.800.00
		42,800.00
Surplus (not taking into account increase in value of land, which may be figured at $18,600)		32,200.00

Duty on Implements

"Now note right here, that all a farmer working a section of land under these conditions would pay in duty on the implements required to earn this large profit, assuming the average life of same to be ten years, comes out at approximately $35 per annum. This is no exaggerated statement of profits and increase in value of land, as thousands of farmers in Saskatchewan can testify, and hundreds who have specially applied themselves and taken advantage of the opportunities afforded, have realized far greater profits than are here shown. How, then, can the farmers of the West claim that they have been ill-used, or not given a fair deal?"

A Book of Interest to Horse Owners

Every horse owner worthy of the name takes a natural and commendable pride in keeping his horse in prime condition. With sensible feeding, proper care and a reasonable amount of work, there is no trouble in doing this. Under such conditions a sound horse looks fine and feels well—is always ready for service and brings the top price when sold.

But accidents will happen, a slight wrench, a sprain, a cut, or some unknown cause may result in lameness. Spavins, ringbones, curbs or splints come sooner or later to every stable. Taken promptly and treated properly none of these troubles are serious. But if neglected or given the wrong treatment, they quickly decrease a horse's ability for work as well as his cash value. It is most important therefore, that every horse owner should have a good knowledge of the horse, his ailments and diseases, and the remedies to be applied. He should know just how to treat all ordinary ailments, and just when it is necessary to call in the greater skill of the veterinary.

One of the quickest and best ways to get posted on this matter is to read the little book, "A Treatise on the Horse and His Diseases," published by the Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., Enosburg Falls, Vermont. The information which it gives is simple, accurate, and easy to find—a valuable point in a book of reference.

This book can be had free of charge by simply writing the publishers or by asking for it at any drug store where Kendall's Spavin Cure is sold by almost every druggist in the country.

To Get Poisons From the Blood

You Have to Depend on the Filtering Process of the Liver and Kidneys

These Organs Alone Can Purify the Blood, and Then Is Their Work Well when Helped by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

No medical treatment can possibly purify the blood except as it sets in healthy working order the kidneys, liver and bowels.

To these organs is assigned the duty of filtering from the blood the poisonous waste matter which is left over when the nutritious elements are extracted from the food you eat. If they are not overcrowded or slow and sluggish in action they keep the blood pure and healthy.

For this reason Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills are the most satisfactory treatment you can possibly obtain to purify the blood.

Their efforts are prompt, definite and certain. The liver action is quickened, the kidneys are invigorated, the regular movement of the bowels is assured. It is only a matter of a few hours until you begin to feel the benefits of this great medicine. Further use, as often as is necessary to keep these organs active, will cleanse and purify the blood and enable the digestive system to properly do its work.

Backache, headache, and bodily pains will disappear, and the fatigue which is an accompaniment of poisons in the system will give way to new vigor and energy. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Viscount Barrington Tells of Man Who Delivered a Speech to No Purpose.

As a young man, Viscount Barrington, who has kept his sixty-third birthday, served in the Coldstream Guards, but his military career was not a lengthy one, and he soon settled down as a country gentleman.

He is descended from John Shute, first Viscount Barrington, who twice came into a fortune in a very odd manner, John Wildman, of Beckett, in the first place, left him all his property, although he was in no way related to him, on the ground "that he was the most worthy of all his acquaintances." In the second place, his cousin Elizabeth married Mr. Francis Barrington, of Tofts, Essex, Sheriff of London, who, dying without issue, left his property to Mr. Shute on the condition—which was promptly complied with — that he should take the name of Barrington.

The present Viscount, the owner of 8,400 acres, succeeded to the title in 1901. He tells the story of a man, just back from a jaunt in the woods, who was trying to tell a friend of the pleasant place where he had camped, the name of which for the moment he had forgotten.

"It was a bend of that fine trout stream up there, you know," he said, "though I can't remember the name. It's a sort of Indian name, means 'Weeping Water'." "Oh," said his friend; "it must have been the Minnebooboo."

Another story concerns a gentleman who at a stockbrokers' meeting in a big office building insisted on making a long speech. When he had concluded, the chairman, quietly asked the verbose orator whether he had quite done.

"Yes, sir, quite!" was the indignant reply.

"You will, consequently, permit me to answer you, sir?"

"Oh, certainly, if you can; but I defy you to do that."

"Well, then," said the chairman, calmly and with measured voice: "I have to inform you that you are in the wrong room and addressing the wrong company. The speech you have just delivered should have been made in No. 6, first floor."

Three Hundred Miles of Offenders.

If all the people convicted last year of offences, great and small, in England, Scotland, and Ireland, were placed side by side, they would form a rank more than 300 miles long, or from London to some distance beyond Paris.

Of these the people guilty of really serious crimes — indictable offences — are nearly one-tenth, and they would cover thirty miles.

There would be seven miles of men and women who committed assaults, eleven miles of beggars, thirty-three miles of thieves and robbers, forty-three miles of drunkards.

The offenders against prison would extend to eighty-three miles, and those sentenced to pay a fine would form a rank about 230 miles long.

The cost of all these is enormous in police, judges, and magistrates, court officials, prisons, and all the locks, bolts, safes, burglar alarms, and other defences, that if the workers necessary to earn the total amount of money required were placed side by side they would measure a line from fifty to sixty miles long.—Answers.

London Police Busy.

The London police are working overtime in their forts to get all crooks and undesirable aliens out of the way before coronation day. A special branch of 60 picked men, chosen for their knowledge of the gentlemen who are not in jail but ought to be, are now located at the principal hotels of London and the leading seaports to pick up American and continental crooks who would be better away from England in June.

On coronation day besides the troops there will be 29,000 uniformed policemen along the line of the parade. They will be drawn strictly from the metropolitan area and no man will be from the provinces. There will be more than 900 plain clothes men from Scotland Yard under command of Chief Superintendant Frost, who will arrest crooks on sight. They will be imprisoned and deported immediately. The number of arrests already made shows the keenness of the Scotland Yard men in the matter of undesirable aliens.

A Costly Tuft.

On the apex of the crown worn by the Prince of Wales on special occasions is a curious feather, or rather tuft of feathers, the top of which is adorned with a gold thread.

The value of this feather is estimated at $50,000, and it has the distinction of being the only one of its kind in human possession. Twenty years passed after the first hunter set out to procure the feather before it was attained, and during that period more than a dozen hunters had lost their lives in the quest.

The costly tuft is of periwak feathers, and the extraordinary danger incurred in procuring it was due to the fact that the periwak is to be found only in dense jungles in which tigers make their lair.

Australia to Change Coinage.

Australia seems likely to follow Canada in the establishment of a decimal money system. The House of Representatives has approved by a large majority a resolution for the establishment of such a system, in weights and measures as well as in money, and wishes the next Imperial Conference to consider the matter for the whole Empire. If Great Britain regards this favorably, the sovereign will probably be made the unit. If not, the dollar, in any case, the colony intends to institute the reform as to money at least, on its own account.

Coffee was first introduced into the Netherlands during the second half of the seventeenth century. In the Netherlands and still more in other countries of Europe chicory is used in the preparation of coffee to make the drink stronger and to give it a darker color.

It Has Many Qualities.—The man who possesses a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is armed against many ills. It will cure a cough, break a cold, prevent sore throat; it will reduce the swelling from a sprain, cure the most persistent sores and will speedily heal cuts and contusions. It is a medicine chest in itself, and can be got for a quarter of a dollar.

Calgary Exhibition

The small army of men now engaged at the Calgary Industrial exhibition grounds will have everything in readiness for the official opening of the exhibition on July 1st. The exhibition will be officially opened at 2 p.m. by the Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, Ottawa. Following the opening the most entertaining programme ever presented will commence. The following judges have been appointed for the live stock:

Mr. R. E. Brennan, Percherons, Suffolk Punch and Belgians.

Dr. J. H. Reid, Guelph, Ont., Clydes, Shires and Heavy Draft.

Mr. T. B. Jenkenson, Seven Persons, Saddle Horses.

Mr. S Shannon, Cloverdale, B. C., Dairy cattle and sheep.

Professor Cumming, Truro, N. S., beef cattle and swine.

The judging will commence at 10 a. m. July 1st except for Clydes and Shires, the judging of which will not commence until Monday, July 3rd on account of the inability of Dr. Reid, to arrive before that.

Although the entry list last year showed such a tremendous increase over the previous year, the exhibition is again able to show a very satisfactory increase in most of the departments.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

Railway Company Are Coming This Way—Make Big Purchase of Property at Macleod.

ANOTHER RAILROAD IS NEEDED

To Hasten More Extensive Developments of Our Vast Coal Properties

For some time past the towns of South-Western Alberta have urged very strongly the construction of another railroad through this section of the country. The Prairie & Pass Promotion League, the Boards of trade, town and village councils, business men and private individuals have long been trying to impress upon the minds of the proper authorities how badly this fast growing district needed another railroad, and at many times those advocates received but scant, if any, encouragement. But, at last, it seems that their efforts have not been unavailing.

Last week the Canadian Northern Railway Company purchased property at Macleod to the value of a quarter million dollars. This, in itself, is a very significant factor and, is, undoubtedly, plain, even to the most indifferent observer, that the Canadian Northern Railway company have considerable of their attention directed towards Macleod, and that ere long their trains will be running into that town.

With the Canadian Northern Railway operating at Macleod it will then mean only the matter of a few months before that great iron horse will be running into The Pass and assisting the C. P. R.—one of the greatest wonders of the world—in bearing to the marts of commerce the coal, coke, lumber, cement, lime, brick and other products of this rich district. It is an undisputed fact that right here in The Pass—with Coleman or Carbondale on the west and with Burmis or Lundbreck on the east—we have one of the richest coal districts on the North-American continent, and what we stand mostly in need of to assist in more extensively developing our vast and valuable coal properties is another railroad. And that better day is dawning.

The following is taken from press despatch which was sent out from Macleod early this week: "Mr. McNellie filed a telegram from M. H. Macleod, general manager, giving assurance that the chief divisional point of the C. N. R. in Southern Alberta will be established here if the town will approve of the suggested plans.

"It was further stated that it is the intention of the company to proceed with the construction of the road due south from Macleod for a distance of from 10 to 16 miles, then swing westward through the Waterton and Kootenay river districts to Pincher Creek and the Pass.

"No time was set when the work would be constructed but it was unofficially stated that the road would be here by this time next year.

"The plans and propositions were unanimously approved by the council and the C. N. R. will be given the new reservation on condition that the agreement is carried out.

"It was further stated on practically good authority that all the repair shops of the C. N. R. for Southern Alberta will be located at Macleod and that a union station will accommodate both the C. N. R. and the G. T. P."

We would like to remind the several Boards of Trade and town councils in The Pass of the necessity of holding joint meetings immediately and to corporate in encouraging the construction of the Canadian Northern Railway through The Pass.

T. Frayer Will Give Prize

A special shot of the Blairmore Gun Club was held at 7 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, to decide the standing of the members and to place them in their proper classes.

Mr. T. Frayer, who presented a handsome and expensive cup to Crow's Nest Pass Hockey league last winter and who has done more to encourage good clean sport than any other person in The Pass, has already decided to present to the winner of the club a suitable shield or cup and also a button for the winner to wear.

The names of those who took part in the shooting, together with their score and class, are given below.

Class "A"		Class "B"
J. S. Murray	21	Sergt Bowers	12
R. McGowan	14	W. Wetmore	9
J.M.Windsor	12	J D.S. Barrett	8
T. B. George		W. Turner	8
		J. F. Miller	5
		Alex. Morency	4
		R. M. Brisco

A committee composed of J. M. Windsor, J. S. Murray and W. J. Bartlett, was appointed to draft rules, scale, etc., governing the season's shoot. Committee will meet at Frank on Monday night next.

Good Operas Coming

W. A. Beebe has already received applications from several of the leading opera companies, to play in the new opera house at Blairmore. The latest high-class companies to make application are the Juvenile Bostonians, Dixie Jubilee Singers, and the Castle Entertainers. These will be here in the fall. The first one will come as soon as the opera season opens. They all consider Blairmore as one of the best places along the line for up-to-date opera companies and they are delighted to learn that Blairmore will, in the course of another week or so, have one of the best opera houses in Southern Alberta and, in fact, just as good as any in this province with the exception of those at Calgary, Edmonton and the Hat.

Lame shoulder is almost invariably caused by rheumatism of the muscles and yields quickly to the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment is not only prompt and effectual, but in no way disagreeable to use. Sold by dealers everywhere.

Sergeant Tucker, of the R. N. W. M. P., shot himself through the arm on Monday morning because his sweetheart refused to see him. At the time of the shooting, Tucker was supposed to be keeping guard over Fiske, under sentence of death.

BUILDING ACTIVITIES

Continue Good Around Blairmore—D. C. Drain Is Having His Hotel Enlarged and

PUT IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION.

Blairmore Hotel Will Be One of the Best in the Crows Nest Pass

Amongst the latest building activities at Blairmore, we notice that D. C. Drain is having his hotel greatly enlarged and that he intends to make that popular hostelry one of the finest and best in the Crow's Nest Pass.

An addition will be put on the north end of the Blairmore, hotel. Its size will be 50 x 55, it will have two stories and a full size basement. By this addition, Mr. Drain will be able to put twenty more bedrooms on the second floor. The dining room and the office will be greatly enlarged. Two large sample rooms will be given place in the new addition and big and advanced improvements will be made all through the hotel. The entire building will have hot and cold water, will be steam heated throughout and have every modern convenience. T. Kennedy is doing the work and expects to have it completed by the early part of August.

This, we are sure, will be read with a great amount of satisfaction by the many Blairmoreites as well as by commercial travellers and others who have long hoped to see in Blairmore such a first-class hotel as Mr. Drain is now transforming his hostelry into.

Poor Sports at Pincher

Coronation day was spent by some shooting, while more went fishing and others went to different places along the "Crow" to witness the celebrations. A few went to Pincher Creek and returned home entirely disgusted with the way the judges handled the races, showing preference to all local horses and refusing to award prizes to Chappel's horse of Bellevue and horses from other points by which several prizes were squarely and fairly won.

R. L. Borden at Macleod

R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party in Canada, delivered an eloquent and convincing address on reciprocity and other public questions of interest to western Canadians, before a large body of people, at Macleod, on Thursday afternoon last. Several people went from The Pass to hear the honorable gentleman and they all returned fully satisfied with the masterful way in which the great Conservative chieftain handled one of the greatest and most talked-of subjects of today. It was indeed a great pity that Mr. Borden could not spare the time to visit here and to give an address in one of the towns in The Pass.

Gun Club

On Thursday morning last the Blairmore Gun Club held their first big shot since the formation of the club. Quite a large number of spectators were over on the grounds, which are just across the river. The following is the result of the shooting out of a possible twenty-five:

J. S. Murray	22
W. Turner	10
J. D. S. Barrett	10
Sargeant Bowers	9
R. MacGowan	6
J. F. Miller	5
Rev. J. F. Hunter	5
A. Morency	4

The following afterwards fired twenty-five shots in succession with the result marked opposite their names:

J. S. Murray	19
R. MacGowan	19
Sargeant Bowers	6
J. F. Miller	5

King George V was crowned and annointed at Westminster Abbey on Thursday of last week.
